

TABLE OF CONTENTS

JANE HWANG DEGENHARDT

Fortune's Empire: Opportunity, Risk, and Value in Early Modern English Drama

- Introduction Fortune's Early Modern Turn: From Pagan Goddess to Proto-Capitalist Economics
- Chapter 1 The Rise and Fall of Fortune: Dangerous Ambition and Inter-imperial World History in Marlowe's Doctor Faustus (c. 1590) and Greene's Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay (c. 1590)
- Chapter 2 Fortunate Returns: Cultivating Theatrical Faith and Off-Stage Space in Heywood's The Four Prentices of London (c.1594) and Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice (c. 1596)
- Chapter 3 Navigating Fortune: Moral Compassing and Affective Labor in Dekker's Old Fortunatus (c. 1600) and Heywood's The Fair Maid of the West (c. 1600)
- Chapter 4 Turning Fortune Around: Recasting the Fame of English Adventurers in Day, Rowley, and Wilkins' The Travels of the Three English Brothers (1607) and Heywood and Rowley's Fortune By Land and Sea (1607)
- Chapter 5 Fortune at Sea and Theatrical Risk in Hamlet (1600) and Pericles (c. 1608)